| 5 slices (90g per slice) | Pork, tenderloin, sliced | 1 ¾ cups | Mango, unripe, strips                 |
| 1 Tbsp                   | Cooking oil              | 1 ⅓ cups | Cucumber, sliced into thin quarters   |
| 2 Tbsps                  | Calamansi juice          | ½ cup    | Pansit-pansitan, blanched             |
| 1 Tbsp                   | Garlic, grated           | 2 Tbsps  | Onion, red, sliced into thin quarters |
| 1 tsp                    | Thyme                    |          | Radish, sliced into thin quarters     |
| ½ tsp                    | Salt, iodized            | ¾ cup    | Calamansi juice, freshly squeezed     |
| ¼ tsp                    | Black pepper, ground     | 2 Tbsps  | Salt, iodized                         |
|                          |                          | ½ tsp    |                                       |

Procedure:

For the grilled pork:

1. In a bowl, combine pork, oil, calamansi juice, garlic, thyme, salt, and pepper. Marinate for 1 hour or overnight.
2. In a griller, grill the pork for 5 minutes each side. Remove from heat and let it rest. Slice the meat into bite-sized pieces and set aside.

For the salad:

1. In a bowl, combine mango, cucumber, pansit-pansitan, onion, radish, calamansi juice, and salt. Mix well.
2. Serve the salad with grilled pork on top.

RECIPE TRIVIA

Grilling is a smart culinary choice for those with hypertension, offering not only smoky and savory flavor, but also allowing the excess fat to drip from meats.
